Culture of Caring: Why investigations matter in creating and keeping a safe workplace environment

Investigations can seem daunting within an organization and can create a heightened concern of retaliation for employees. During this session, however, Mr. Feray will convey how internal investigations can include employees at the center of the investigations process. In truly hearing employee feedback, investigators gain the best insight and accurate data for the investigation, while also being able to add a level of comfort and protection in the work environment for their fellow employees.
